

Hi Liza,

It's been not a year, yeah! When we become best friends. I know every beginning is a blessing. But still thinking about the day when we enjoyed the party and made the group, it seems like it's just yesterday. Years passes so quickly. Still enjoying the flows of time which made a great scar in our friendship. Are we really friends? Well. Certainly not. We are more than the friends. Remember the day, I told to wait on the station but can't. That day I made your heart bleed. But after coming to know about you, I also bled too much. The night talks are still memorable. The way you make me feel happy in my sad times is really unthinkable. Yes, you are the strength. All I want that the two friends will sit on a rock, looking at the sunset. I will place my head to your shoulders and cry as much as I can. The full load will be dismissed from the heart. I know that all sounds crazy, but I can't skip anything today. You know what makes me too much sorry, when you didn't hear my words. But still in my heart I know, you still care and you always will. I don't know what I am telling being so much emotional. The incidents may not follow the time frame. But it is real. You know what I fear most? Losing you. Yes, I fear too much about this, maybe because I lost too much friends till today, many of them for my own behavior. Yes, I always think that I was the guilty. But now, I don't want to lose this friend anymore. But I have to say, within all these fears, it is the little talks that comforts me too much, I hope you too. All of our problems may not be solved by us. But we give us the power to deal with the problems. I hope time will not be scary about our friendship. Hope it crosses all the dangers. Though there is no day to wish a best friend, still I say if there is a little bit of oxygen in my life, you own the 50% of the oxygen. HAPPY BEST FRIEND DAY, LIZA.

--From,

Your Best friend